Silver Bells.

On Friday, November 20th, Mr. Henry Schill and Louise, his wife, and Donze, celebrated their silver wedding at Weingarten. The pious couple had intended to celebrate the day quietly, but their friends and neighbors decided otherwise and when they entered the church, they were surprised to find singers, friends, neighbors and school children assembled in the sacred edifice, ready for High Mass during which father, mother and grown-up children received Holy Communion. The younger children of the happy couple were busy singing and serving at the altar during mass while Master Leo Donze, nephew of the couple, played the organ. This proves how much the family is identified with church and school and the universal respect the jubilarians enjoy among their neighborhood. In the evening the whole family, consisting of father and mother, seven boys and six girls, assembled with grand-nephew Donze around the same supper table at which the priest presided. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schill are the happy parents of thirteen unmarried children and when they went to celebrate a feast they find fifteen ready guests at the table; and should they want to give a dance, seven pairs could be found on the floor and there would be one left to play the fiddle. On this occasion however, their relatives, friends and neighbors took possession of the house in the evening and kept possession of it till the small morning hours reminded some of them that Saturday had arrived. The singers who so kindly offered their services during High Mass furnished the music gratis in the evening. The merriment of the weather kept the numerous brothers and sisters of Mr. Schill from attending the feast; but the whole family of his wife and all the neighbors of the happy couple were glad to find an excuse in the bad weather to stay longer and spend a few happy hours under the hospitable roof of the old Donze home. The tastes of the guests were different in many respects: some played cards and some played the organ, some laughed and some sang, some eat and some drank, some played and some danced; the merry voices of the children mingled with the serious words of the old, telling the story of by-gone days when the hardy settler cut the first mighty oak to build a cabin for his family.

If the prayers of the guests are heard at the throne of God, Mr. Schill and his estimable wife will celebrate their golden wedding and spend many more years in the kind service of God and of their neighbor.

Science in Bread Making.

At the recent annual meeting of the American Chemical Society, held in Washington, D. C., the question of the value of carbonate of ammonia as a leavening agent in bread, or as used in baking powders came up for discussion, in which Prof. Barker, of the University of Pennsylvania, and President of the Society; Dr. Richardson, late of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington; Dr. Wm. McMurtrie, late Prof. of Chemistry in the University of Illinois; Dr. E. H. Bartley, late Chemist of the Brooklyn, N. Y. Board of Health, and Prof. of Chemistry of the Long Island College, and others took part.

The consensus of opinion was overwhelming in favor of the employment of ammonia. It was stated as a fact that ammonia rendered the gluten of the flour more soluble than the original gluten, and that the bread in which this action was produced by carbonate of ammonia must be more digestible and hence more healthful, and because of the extreme volatility of carbonate of ammonia and its complete expulsion from the bread in the process of baking, it is one of the most useful, most healthful and most valuable leavening agents known.

These conclusions are borne out by the very elaborate and exhaustive experiments made by Prof. J. W. Mallet of the University of Virginia, which show conclusively that bread made with a baking powder in which one per cent. of carbonate of ammonia is used, in connection with cream of tartar and soda, is not only of uniformly better color and texture, but a product more wholesome, because the ammonia serves to neutralize any organic or lactic acids present in the flour.
